It must be the season. Lately, the editor said it seems everybody doesn't smile as much as usual. He goes around town saying, "smile, smile. Why's everybody frowning?"

Five different reasons. The Christmas bills have arrived, taxes are due, and there's always the to-do about snow or no snow.

Come on. The bills will be paid somehow, taxes will be over for a while, the news always has bad and there is a chance that, someday, the weather won't be so rotten.

Yes, try a smile. If it won't pay the bills or taxes, end the world, or create infinite, it will, at least, brighten this dreary sky a bit.

As you think about land use, think about local control. Local control - the best in the state. The Clinton County Board of Commissioners has endorsed the concept of "local control," which is a popular proposal by the President's Advisory Commission on Agriculture, Industry, and the Environment, which offers a promising approach to the land use problems of local communities.

The concept of "local control" is based on the idea that land use decisions should be made at the local level, by local residents, who are best able to judge the needs and demands of their own communities. This approach is designed to promote the well-being of local communities by ensuring that decisions about land use are made in a way that is consistent with the local needs and desires of the residents.

To achieve this goal, the "local control" approach involves several key elements. First, it emphasizes the importance of involving local residents in the decision-making process, by providing opportunities for public input and participation. Second, it recognizes the need to balance the rights of property owners with the needs of the community as a whole. Finally, it seeks to promote a sense of responsibility and stewardship among local residents, by encouraging them to take an active role in shaping the development of their communities.

In conclusion, the "local control" approach offers a promising approach to the land use problems of local communities. By involving local residents in the decision-making process, and promoting a sense of responsibility and stewardship among local residents, this approach has the potential to promote the well-being of local communities and ensure that decisions about land use are made in a way that is consistent with the local needs and desires of the residents.

Indian mental health

The concept that every American child should be educated in his or her native language is an important one. It also recognized that there are many students who have more than their share of problems, and who may benefit from being educated in their native language. This is true in all segments of American society.

Throughout the nation, the number of Indian children is higher than that of any other minority group.

The citizens and leaders of America's Indian community have an obligation to ensure that these children have the opportunity to succeed. They should be provided with educational programs that are designed to meet the needs of their students.

Mental Health Board -

Encouraged by the success of the program, the Board for the mid-Michigan American child should be established. This would be a Board that would have the responsibility of developing and implementing programs designed to meet the needs of Indian children.

Chamberlain leads call for upgrading of meat products

Chamberlain has recently called for a program to upgrade the quality of meat products produced in Michigan. This is important, as meat products are a significant part of the state's economy and are exported to other states.

The quality of meat products produced in Michigan can be improved by ensuring that the animals are well cared for and that the processing facilities are clean and modern. This would not only benefit the state's economy, but also provide a safer product for consumers.

Lowering the rate

The state's income tax rate could be lowered to 3 percent. This would provide much-needed relief to consumers and businesses, and would help to stimulate the economy.

The proposal would also help to reduce the burden on low-income families, who would benefit the most from the lower tax rate. It is important to note that the tax rate would only be lowered temporarily, as the state's budget situation improves.

Germination test for soybeans

Don’t be the fall winner and lose the Spring contest, because of growing conditions including soil type, rainfall, and fertilizer management. Soybeans have a high germination rate at the time of planting.

Using the germination test:

1. Pour 20 soybeans in a small container.
2. Add water to the level of the soybeans.
3. Keep the soybeans in a cool environment (about 50 degrees F).
4. After 48 hours, count the number of germinated soybeans.
5. Repeat the process for 48 hours and count the total number of germinated soybeans.

If the germination rate is less than 90%, it is recommended to fight the test and adjust the planting conditions accordingly.

State develops egg industry

LANSING — Michigan producers are expanding their egg industry, which shows promise of developing new opportunities for state-produced eggs. The Michigan Egg Marketing Division of Farm Services, for example, has published guidelines for egg producers to follow when marketing their eggs. The guidelines address issues such as egg size, quality, and handling.

Milk for bottling has price increase

“Milk for bottling has a price increase of 1.0 cents per pound,” said Duane & Velmar Green, president of the Michigan Dairy Farmers Association. This increase applies to milk delivered direct from the dairy farmer organizations and institutional users and commercial and retail milk prices remain the same.

Michigan Milk Producers Association, through Great Lakes-Midwest Dairy Association, has announced that the price of premium milk has increased by 1.0 cents. The price increase applies to milk delivered direct from the dairy farmer organizations and institutional users.

“Demand for milk has increased and we need to increase the price to cover the costs of production,” said Mr. Ray Moore, executive vice president of Michigan Milk Producers Association.

The Michigan Dairy Farmers Association encourages dairy farmers to increase their milk production to meet the demand. Milk is a valuable product and a key source of income for dairy farmers across the state.

The price of milk for bottling and retail is now $2.00 per pound. This increase is due to the higher cost of production. Dairy farmers are working hard to keep up with the demand for milk, and the price increase is a reflection of the efforts they are putting into their livelihoods.

“Dairy farmers are dedicated to providing high-quality milk to consumers. We are grateful for the support of our customers and appreciate the price increase,” said Mr. Ray Moore.

Michigan Dairy Farmers Association encourages dairy farmers to continue to produce milk and to stay competitive in the market. Dairy farmers are working hard to meet the demand for milk and the price increase is a reflection of the efforts they are putting into their livelihoods.

A New Tool
Seven Midstages between now and next fall will bring to farmers a better marketing tool, the Michigan Agricultural Marketing and Bargaining Act. Governor William Milliken signed the Act on January 17, 1973.

The Act, which was introduced in the Senate early in 1972 but did not receive a hearing until the fall of that year, carries with it the promise of a more equitable marketing environment and gain proper terms of trade for farm commodities. The Act, which was in the works for several months, is the result of the efforts of the Michigan Farm Bureau, the state's largest farm organization, Governor Milliken and several senators and representatives of the legislature.

The legislation, which was introduced in the House in early 1972, applies to all farm products, agricultural cooperatives and agricultural marketing associations. It covers all forms of marketing from single crops or specialties to an entire season's harvest.

The Act is a step in a long-term program to create a better marketing environment for farm products. It was the result of the efforts of the Michigan Farm Bureau, the state's largest farm organization, Governor Milliken and several senators and representatives of the legislature.
