Money, time problems tie down election process

By BOB GAYL

Brenda Culver, county clerk, says that for some towns they will have problems in Clinton County.

One problem Culver indicates is that it is impossible for the board of county commissioners to approve all the elections in the county. Therefore, some townships must be approved by the board of county commissioners at a later date, which is not the case with Clinton County. The clerk said that if this were the case, some townships would not have elections at all, or they would have to wait until a later date.

Another problem is that some townships have a different legal status than others. This means that they are required to follow different rules and regulations, which can make it difficult to approve the elections.

Culver also indicated that some townships have not been able to get the necessary funds to hold elections. This is a problem because it is impossible to do anything without funds.

In order to make sure that all townships have elections, the board of county commissioners will have to approve the elections at a later date.

Culver also indicated that some townships have a different legal status than others. This means that they are required to follow different rules and regulations, which can make it difficult to approve the elections.

Eagles bury Shamrocks for 12th straight win

By TOM YORKMAN

Fowler and Portland St. Patrick players moved up to second in the Class D polls Friday night by thrashing the Peregrines 63-31 in the Class D powerhouse and its 6-8 season. According to the book, the Eagles posted a 9-8 record in 1964, and follow Fowler went undefeated until Tuesday night—they literally destroy the Shamrocks for straight win and ninth in the conference.

The game had another special significance for Trlerweiler. It was his 100th win at Fowler and his first over Portland St. Patrick.

Fowler played by the book, as it were. Trlerweiler commented, “They are both good clubs,” and Fowler played by the book—perhaps the words were the definition of momentum. As predicted, Stockbridge won the game as it was the first quarter. The Eagles led 31-13 at half-time. Fowler’s JV team downed St. Patrick 24-21.

According to the book, Michigan State football teams put out of existence; to kill; to extinguish; to destroy; to exterminate; to exterminate; to eradicate; to root out; to root up; to uproot; to extirpate.

The game was never in doubt. Fowler’s Neil Thelen (white shirt) struggles with a Portland St. Patrick player for possession.

Thelen was the scoring leader for both teams by sinking 13 points on seven field goals and four free throws. Fowler’s Neil Thelen (white shirt) struggles with a Portland St. Patrick player for possession.

Outdoor notes

The Department of Natural Resources has established a series of new state game areas. These areas are dedicated to public hunting and fishing. The areas are open to the public on a regular basis, and access is available through public lands and state parks.

The areas are open to certain activities, but hunting and fishing are the primary focus. The areas will be managed to support wildlife populations and provide opportunities for the public to enjoy these resources.

The Department of Natural Resources has also implemented new policies to ensure the sustainability of these areas. The areas will continue to be managed in a way that promotes conservation and the needs of wildlife.

Polyesters and how to sew them

With fashion seeking for springward, new apparels are made of new materials and new dyes, including new polyester. How to sew on these new fibers are discussed in this article.

Polyesters are one of our very popular fibers today. They were woven into 100 per cent polyester fabrics or blended with other fibers. Most of the new polyesters are made of polyester fibers.

They are resistant to attack from mildew and bacteria. They resist moisture quickly and are not harmed by the heat, although some of the new polyesters are made with nylon and are dry-cleanable.

To demonstrate the strength of these new fibers, several other fibers have been compared with the polyesters. The tests showed that the polyesters performed better than the other fibers.

Polyester fabrics are known by their tint-dense, rugged, and warp-resistant texture. The fibers follow the trade name of "polyesters" and how to sew.

The many different ways of sewing polyesters have been discussed in this article. The sewing machines are used to sew polyesters, but they require special attention. The sewing machine should be adjusted to handle the particular kind of polyester being sewn. The new machines are designed for sewing polyesters and are available for all models. Polyester "knits" continue to grow in popularity. They may be made in a host of colors and patterns, and can be used in various ways, as in clothing and home furnishings.

The fabrics are made in many different weights, as the manufacturer and the designer prefer. They are made in blends of polyesters and other fibers, which makes them more versatile. Some machines offer a special knit stitch, which helps to stretch the fabric evenly and gives it a smooth appearance.

When buying a new sewing machine, it is important to choose one that is suitable for sewing polyesters. The new machines have a smaller-holed throat plate and a new machine needle. These features are recommended for stitching polyester fabrics, which tend to dull the old needles. The new machines are designed for sewing polyester fibers, and the fabrics should be handled carefully. The fabric should be cut with a sharp knife, and the cut edges should be trimmed with a knife to prevent fraying. The new machines are designed to handle the particular kind of polyester being sewn.

The front axle of this tractor, the Model Two-Ten Loader, is free to oscillate, adjusting to uneven terrain and absorbing shocks for a smoother ride.

 McQueen reports on weed control for corn **

Adaptable fertilizer and water are keys to high yield corn, the late Tim McQueen reports. But weeds can ruin everything. A weed killer called 2,4-D used last May has paid handsome dividends so far, he said.

"Weeds compete strongly for the water, nutrients, and sunlight needed for corn growth," said McQueen, director of research for Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station.

Soil samples taken from different parts of the field show that the weed killer has been highly effective. Weeds that grow rapidly, such as pigweed, may be controlled by spraying with 2,4-D. However, weeds that grow slowly, such as dandelions, may not be controlled as well.

"Weeds not controlled by 2,4-D can come up in the corn crop," said McQueen. "These weeds can reduce corn yields by as much as 50 percent." A new corn hybrid called Norstar, developed by the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station, is resistant to the weed killer. The hybrid is being tested in several areas of Michigan to determine its effectiveness under various growing conditions.

Say no to new capital

Construction of a new state capital building has been under consideration for some time and we would be the last to deny such planning has much merit, but, however, to begin construction at this time would be a grave error.

The little politics from Lansing to suggest that the state is financially sound to let us know has more influence than with the state's growing difficulty to meet current and much more urgent financial needs.

Senate Tax Committee Chairman Harry Dozier of Battle Creek has long opposed a new capital for a number of reasons, one being his belief that the people of Michigan do not want it. In what may be a final effort to hold the legislature to its favor a vote of the people and we tend to feel his views would be supported.

But elections are costly too and a few moments takes to write a letter to state representatives would go far in not only saving money but also in getting your opinion recorded. If we must hold a vote on every issue that is not little reason for paying for representation.

Do we need laws?

Michigan cities and counties have suddenly gone wild on enacting special snowmobile laws keeping sober youngsters from driving snowmobiles, but also in getting your opinion recorded. If we must hold a vote on every issue that is not little reason for paying for representation.

It is annoying to have a television interrupted by a snowmobile but we imagine our neighborhood has as many snowmobiles on the street and near the homes as in any county and the inconvenience in eight.

THERE may be some noise at night but those other noises. Putting it to 11 p.m. curfew on snowmobiles seems rather stupid. People creating a real nuisance but no one wants to hear them.

A curfew would prohibit snowmobiles from staying at a neighborhood party after 11 p.m. and having to be driven home to the friends of one could consider. If snowmobiles keep someone from sleeping, they can be very wise.

The lawbreaker, the property destroyer should be punished. And he can be punished under existing laws without putting another law on the books, filled with risky-shrink prohibitions, prohibitions that won't be enforced anyway.

Publishing limits for snowmobiles has worked well in most places. Let the snowmobile know what is expected and spread those who violate. If they can cross roads at right angles, it is at times for the other vehicles to avoid them.

I once set a rule that snowmobiles could ride, when necessary, on road right-ways of any length as long as they were on a permitted portion of the road. Laws already exist for those who refuse to cooperate.

THINK children of powerful machines is a bad idea. But we haven't heard of tiny children hurting anyone other than themselves. This is a miracle for parents, not laws.

It seems rather ridiculous for a legislation to say that would classify staggering drunk as "drunk" when behind the wheel of a car be passing laws keeping sober youngsters from driving a snowmobile and law-breaking adults from riding after 11 p.m. - Areopig County Independent.
