Probably less than half of the population of the region, which is headquartered in Ingham, Lapeer and Saginaw counties, are aware of the services of the Protective Service of the Michigan Department of Public Health and Human Services. This is not the case in other parts of the state, where the service is more widely known and appreciated.

Neglect and abuse of children have become more common in recent years, and as a result, the demand for the Protective Service's services has increased. However, due to the limited resources of the department, it is not always possible to provide the necessary care and protection for all children who need it.

The service is responsible for investigating allegations of child neglect or abuse, and for arranging for protective and corrective treatments for children who have been found to be at risk. However, due to the lack of funding and resources, it is often difficult to provide the necessary care and support for all children who need it.

The Protective Service works closely with other agencies and organizations, such as the local health departments, schools, and social service agencies, to provide the best possible care for children in need.

We should all do our part to support the Protective Service and other organizations that work to protect children from neglect and abuse. By spreading awareness and providing support, we can help to ensure that all children have a safe and healthy childhood.
