There’s more at stake than just higher taxes

Dear Editor:

Some learning value or social advantage is attained by many of our children in the school system. I feel that, for this reason, the future of many of our children depends on the actions of the teachers who are not as competent as most are in methods of teaching. We should do nothing that might encourage the teachers of your district to improve their abilities.

Many people say they are already paying higher local taxes. Many more will come to this conclusion in the future. I am concerned with the letters and efforts of some to indicate that the upcoming millage is necessary. My views in this regard.

If we go into the future, we will find that the state and national governments will continue to cut back in aid to education. This could be the first step in the eventual running of our schools by the federal government which in turn will do such things as dictate the standards of education and methods of instruction. Our government may not reach this point, but it could happen in a few years.

The issue could just be the increase in operating millage. It is so important to the local level. A vote against the millage could mean even more financial problems to the local school districts. An increase in operating millage would then be returned to the district to inform the people and allow them to decide if the school will be open. This seems to be a time of tremendous programs. There’s more than just money at stake than political。

To those who vote no, I suggest they are not in favor of those who have been rejected. The 12.8 mills is necessary. Some suggestions have been made up as to where the money obtained would be spent by the school district. I am not sure of the exact amount that would be spent by the school district. The amount required to maintain our town would not exceed it. The amount required to maintain our town is now enough to exercise all their financial problems to the local school district. This is the life blood that keeps the community that they are concerned for that matter. The new for the last year, month, week or day, that has moved here within the district to inform the people and allow them to decide if the school will be open. The amount required to maintain our town is now enough to exercise all their financial problems to the local school district. This seems to be a time of tremendous programs. There’s more than just money at stake than political.

$78,000 to remodel elementary school

As open season on elementary building progress for the people of the community extends into the future, work on the DeWitt High School, St. Johns, will continue to progress. The second week of April, 1968, will mark a major milestone in the construction of the new high school, as the roof is scheduled to be completed during that week.

Students will be occupying the new high school during the final stages of construction, with the exception of the cafeteria, which will be completed later.

The project, which is projected to cost $78,000, will provide additional classroom space for the approximately 670 students enrolled in the elementary and secondary grades.

The project includes the installation of new heating and cooling systems, new windows and doors, new electrical systems, and new plumbing systems.

The project is expected to be completed by the end of the school year, with the new high school opening in September, 1968.

The project is being funded through a bond issue approved by the voters of the DeWitt School District in 1967.

DeWitt studying millage, school building proposals

BRIGHTON—DeWitt school officials have decided to study millage to build a new school, but they have no plans at this time to go to popular referendum over the issue.

DeWitt—members of the board of education are studying millage to build a new school. They have asked Dr. Donald Skillen of the American Institute of Architects to study the problem.

The board has decided to build a new school because the present building is too small. The school has 500 students and plans to build a new school that will accommodate 600 students.

The board will hold a special meeting next week to discuss the millage issue.

Additives make for superior products

By HELEN B. TOLICH
Extension Home Economist

It's frequently written that for the sake of convenience, we use additives in our food. The convenience is the fact that you don't have to prepare the meal and you can use a variety of flavors and textures in one menu. The result is that you have a more diverse menu to choose from and you can eat healthier.

Additives are also used in other industries such as cosmetics, pharmaceuticals, and medicine. They are used to prevent spoilage, preserve taste, and increase the shelf life of products.

OCCASIONALLY, we hear about the use of synthetic food additives. This is because additives are used in such a diverse range of products that people may be concerned about their safety. However, the FDA has conducted extensive testing and determined that additives are safe for consumption.

The main concern about additives is that they may cause cancer or other health problems, but these concerns have not been supported by scientific evidence. In fact, many additives have been used for decades without any evidence of harm.

The food industry has made strides in developing additives that are safe for consumption. These additives are carefully tested and approved by the FDA before they are allowed on the market.

In conclusion, additives are an essential part of the modern food industry. They make our food more diverse and allow us to eat healthier. It is important to be aware of additives and to read labels to ensure that the products you are eating are safe for consumption.

Change in thinking needed, agribusiness director says

More "horizontal" instead of "vertical power" will be needed for profitable marketing and distribution of products to the rural community, according to Robert N. Blut, director of agriculture and rural affairs at Michigan State University.

Advertising, opening of the local annual Agricultural Marketing and Agribusiness Clinic at MSU March 31, reflects "a major concern" over the influence of vertical give-and-take between interests and "a desire on the part of the industry to get a better handle on what is going on in the market,"

The influence of competitors to plan the new marketing plan for a cooperative marketing program for the industries. There are a few big players in the market, but the majority are small players. Early planting pays

Parmer lane knew how to do the best of a dollar on his homestead and his crops, as noted by Dr. K.R. Parmer, Michigan State University crop specialist.

"Farmers should be ready to plant corn as soon as possible after May 1, even in districts where May frosts are possible."

Mr. Parmer explains that early planted corn produces higher yields because cutting and early planting developed stronger, more active root systems. This makes it possible for top yields to be obtained in districts where May frosts can be expected.

The early planting dates for various districts in Michigan are recommended starting April 15 for the southern half and April 25 for the northern half of the state. Early planting dates are necessary so that each day planting was divided into four equal periods of 10 days, according to Parmer. Each period was given a weight factor of one, two, three, and four for the first through fourth planting dates, respectively.

To increase yields with high population (20,000 or more) per acre, the farmer should make sure the land is clean and free of weeds to allow the plants to get off to a good start in the field.

In the case of rain, the farm agent suggests that farmers plant by mid-May 20 degrees or more is enough to start the corn germination process. The farmer should be aware that a minimum temperature of 50 degrees is required for successful germination if the soil temperature remains below the soil surface until the plants are 3 to 5 feet high by one inch, delayed silking three-fourths of a day, and maximum grain yields come from 28 bushels more than the average and 54 bushels more than the yield of the control.

Rossman says, "To increase yields with high population (20,000 or more) per acre, the farmer should make sure the land is clean and free of weeds to allow the plants to get off to a good start in the field. A good 'crop' demands good care

No elections in recent years have meant so much to so many people as the school elections which took place last Saturday, March 22, in the St. Johns and Ovid-Elsie school districts.

These elections are of primary importance because the district that wins will be the one that gets the millage increases it needs. The millage is an important tool that the rural schools use to keep their buildings, their school districts, their educational programs from falling apart.

In both districts, the alternatives to a yes vote were changes in the educational programs being offered. Both school districts are in the red by about $100,000 over the past two years and without an increase in the millage for next year they'll have no choice but to cut some of the programs and maybe even some of the buildings.

The requests of both school districts are not out of line, certainly, since neither is proposing any vast new programs. The request is simply to maintain the status quo, which, after all, is a vote for the present.

The St. Johns district proposes to update its curriculum in the rural schools to put them on the same level as the city schools in the district. Beyond that, everything is status quo.

It's too bad the status quo has to be so expensive. If we were a nation that thought like individuals and businesses, find, they could cut good employees by paying the same wages they receive, that's what the schools are paying more; that is, they can't maintain their buildings at the same level as the homesteaders. They can't do that, and the only tax increase for next year that will help is the P.E.O. millage.

It's time we say "yes" to our schools. We can afford a yes vote to guarantee a good educational yield; we can't afford a no vote.

Conservation education is for everyone

"Learn To Live With Nature" is the theme for their visit, March 17-25, Conservation education is the key to discovering how to make the most of our precious natural resources.

The Standard-three R's of learning education, are: Reduce, Reuse and Recycle. Change the first R to Resources.

In addition to Reading, 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic, every child should be learning about Resources,

"Conservation education is for everyone," said Stanley Baird, chairman of the Clinton County Soil Conservation District.

"Teaching about conservation is like all other learning programs. The schools are teaching the dangers of pollution and erosion, the adult community should be working to keep our country a beautiful place in which to live."

"Conservation education is for everyone," he added.

The Clinton County Soil Conservation District is holding an educational week in March. The Soil Conservation Week is the eighth annual Festival of Soil and Water Conservation, and is sponsored by the Clinton County Soil Conservation District.

The festival is scheduled for March 17 to 24, and we strongly recommend that you attend. This is the "cost of living" for the community, and it's something we can all afford.

The Clinton County Soil Conservation District is located at 120 E. Main St., St. Johns, Michigan. The festival will be held at the Clinton County Soil Conservation District.

"Learn To Live With Nature," then improve your understanding of the world around us, and of the world that surrounds us.
