"With the exception of the research on the voter turnout," Milliken said, "there is little reason to worry about the Republicans in Michigan."

"The Republicans are not in the "red,"" he said, "but they are not in the "blue," either."

"The "red" is the Democratic Party," Milliken continued, "and the Republicans are in the "gray.""

"The Republicans can be saved," Milliken said, "but they must be saved by the people."

"The Republicans must be saved by the grass-roots," Milliken said. "If the Republicans are to be saved, they must be saved by the people."
