The Zee farm is considered a model milking operation.

Julius Becker Week

A dedication to his profession has brought statewide recognition to Julius Becker. For 41 years he worked with the Department of State Highways in various capacities until, at retirement last January, he became a top-level highway administrative engineer. For his work in his profession and his contributions to the development of the state freeway system, Julius was recognized by having a roadside park on M-37 near Mesick named in his honor. As a distinguished St. Johns resident in whom the entire community can take pride, we add to Mr. Becker's honors by naming him as our Citizen of the Week.

“Til It Fits...”

No poem for spring

By Jim Fitzgerald

MICHIGAN: Unemployment is running a bit high in a high-stimulated, cold climate. Not to be discouraged, however, the Michigan unemployment rates have soared, and the newswoman is braving the Great Lakes cold to report on the latest figures.

And a purpose tried and true?

I've been asking myself this question every year for the past fifteen. When the galleries fail to cheer? When once more facing the test, I'd try to save all this long wait, else why this time wasting delay?

I'm asking myself this question every year for the past fifteen. When the galleries fail to cheer? When once more facing the test, I'd try to save all this long wait, else why this time wasting delay?

When the postman did his duty, I rushed out to get the good news, When once more facing the test, I'd try to save all this long wait, else why this time wasting delay?

Unemployment problem

By Donnie Traylor, Plain Dealer

For the first time since his latest visit to Brazil, President Nixon has made it clear that he will not be able to stop the crisis in his own country. The President's visit to Brazil was seen as a last-ditch attempt to save his government, but it was clear that he had run out of cards to play.

The President's message to the Legislature on the current economic situation was not well received. The President's message was especially critical of the Congress, and he accused it of being stubborn and resistant to change.

The President's message was also met with criticism from the business community. Many business leaders felt that the President's message was too negative and that it would make it difficult for them to do business.

The President's message was also met with criticism from the labor community. Many labor leaders felt that the President's message was too dictatorial and that it would make it difficult for them to organize.

The President's message was also met with criticism from the media. Many journalists felt that the President's message was too propaganda-driven and that it would make it difficult for them to do their jobs.

The President's message was also met with criticism from the public. Many people felt that the President's message was too self-serving and that it would make it difficult for them to believe in their leaders.

The President's message was also met with criticism from the military. Many military leaders felt that the President's message was too political and that it would make it difficult for them to do their jobs.

New approaches

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Mitchell, landscape and government which have been unorthodox in fighting crime in the past have been given a new thrust and a new sense of direction in combating drug traffic.

Gradually, we are starting to change the procedures which have been successful in fighting crime in the past and we are using new and different ways of combating drug traffic.

The President's new approach in combating drug traffic is one of the most effective measures to combat drug traffic in recent years. This new approach has yielded remarkable results.

Drug lords and their agents are being arrested and sent to prison for long terms, and drug traffic is being cut off at the source. This is leading to a decrease in the amount of drugs entering the country.

Tale of the zipper

Did you ever think about how many buttons, snaps or hooks and eyes you might be sewing on all those family garments if zippers had never been invented? Chances are you'd be surprised at the count.

These wonderful fasteners deserve just a little extra care to keep them in good working order and give you long lasting satisfaction.

Never dry clean, press or iron an open zipper. Synthetic coil zippers should always be pressed with a press cloth and at a low temperature. Always use a press cloth when pressing from the right side. This eliminates shining or even scorching as well as an imprint of the fastener showing through.

When wringing out washable items, close the zippers and protect them within the folds of the garment. Never give them a hard twist or pull.

Zipper tapes should always be pre-shrunk before applying them to a garment. Immerse the closed zipper in hot water for a few minutes, remove it to air dry. Lightly press the tapes before applying.

Sometimes after a lot of washing and wearing zippers get a little ornery and tend to stick. Give them a face lift with beeswax, candlewax or a commercial zipper lubricant. Things will run a lot more smoothly - for them and for you.
