Burr M. Clair, 1775 E. Oakwood, and Michael W. Elsen, 1874 E. Oakwood, both suffered injuries when their cars collided about 6:45 Saturday evening at the intersection of North Oakland and East West streets. Elsen’s car was on the cross street. He was going west on Walker streets. Eisler’s car is in the foreground. He was going east on National Bank street.

A similar operation, at Ithaca, which was opened in 1941 by Dr. A.N. Sauders, who has been operator ever since, has its offices on the second floor of the Clinton County Court house, 100 E. Michigan Ave. The business involves more than one room, along the walls.

Rhines owns the Yellowjacket, a similar operation, at深渊.

Just south of the stoplight at M-21, Lynn L. Smith, 51, of St. Johns, died in the accident 5:30 a.m. Saturday.

Rhines plans to expand soon to offer milk shakes and ice cream, and to serve all types of meat. He and E.O. (Red) Lundy and his volunteers plan to work on the playground equipment up north on Oakland. She was ticketed for failure to stop and pay the fine.

In 1941 Smith was ticketed for failure to stop and pay the fine. 2 PERSONS MUISHED IN INTERSECTION CRASH

BUTTERFLIES AREN'T HUMAN

Our Sally Millers trip was a huge success. After we saw the museum's collection of two hundred butterflies, we went outside to collect specimens. Then we taxied, and took pictures. Here's one with two, on the left, laughing at Zeba. We went in a big discussion about whether or not butterflies can feel.

While our teacher explained bugs with the extrovert, we sat around and talked. After butterflies, we started on spiders and cobwebs, and whether or not they have life on the store. Sometimes, don't ask me what, we get on the subject of God.

You know, I didn't realize how ignorant some kids were about God. After a while, I found out how good it is to have some ideas about what, and why, and by the way, a few of those kids were really way out in left field.

Now it's up to me to show them what they have been missing. I think I've talked them all into going to church with me Sunday.
Michigan week postscripts

Themes reflect on Great Lakes State

Michigan Week as a formal event was kicked off Sunday in the old Wayside Church, with a solemn and respectful observance in honor of the great state of Michigan. The event was held in conjunction with the Michigan State University Alumni Association and the Michigan State University Alumni Association Women's Auxiliary.

The ceremony began with a procession of students from various Michigan colleges and universities, carrying flags and banners representing their institutions. The procession was followed by a speech by the governor, highlighting the rich history and unique character of Michigan.

The event continued with a series of performances by local musicians and dancers, showcasing the diverse cultural heritage of the state. The evening concluded with a fireworks display, illuminating the night sky with vibrant colors.

The Michigan Week celebration aims to raise awareness about the importance of Michigan and its contributions to the nation. It is a time to celebrate the state's natural beauty, rich history, and vibrant culture.

How much extra nitrogen does corn need?

This is one of the first questions everyone has to answer. The question is: How much extra nitrogen does corn need? The answer is: It depends on the specific condition of the field and the corn variety.

WATERWEED CONTROL POSSIBLE

One of the most pressing problems in the Great Lakes area is the control of aquatic weeds. These weeds, which are often known as "weeds" or "mats," can cause significant problems for waterways and harbors. Aquatic weeds can reduce water quality, obstruct navigation, and damage recreational facilities. In this article, we will discuss the methods of aquatic weed control and the importance of managing these weeds.

Aquatic weeds are plants that grow in or on aquatic habitats such as lakes, rivers, and coastal areas. They can be divided into two categories: free-floating and rooted. Free-floating weeds float on the water surface and are not anchored to the substrate, while rooted weeds are attached to the substrate and can move freely in the water. Aquatic weeds can be controlled using various methods, including chemical, mechanical, and biological methods.

Chemical control involves the use of herbicides to kill aquatic weeds. Herbicides are chemicals that are specifically designed to kill or inhibit the growth of aquatic plants. Chemical control is often used in situations where other methods are not practical or effective. However, chemical control can have negative effects on the environment, such as harming non-target species and reducing water quality.

Mechanical control involves the physical removal of aquatic weeds. This can be done using a variety of methods, such as mechanical harvesters, hand-picking, and chemical treatment. Mechanical control is often used as a follow-up to chemical control to ensure complete eradication. However, mechanical control can be expensive and time-consuming.

Biological control involves the use of natural predators or diseases to control aquatic weeds. This method is often used for the control of invasive species, such as zebra mussels. Biological control can be effective, but it can also have negative effects on the environment, such as harming native species.

It is important to monitor and manage aquatic weeds to prevent their growth and spread. Aquatic weeds can cause significant problems for waterways and harbors, and proper management is essential to maintain the health and functionality of these habitats. By understanding the methods of aquatic weed control, we can work together to protect our waterways and harbors.

Recipe for democracy

Pride and responsibility

There's not much doubt that America is going through a moral and social revolution — and what that is, in effect, shifting the very roots of democracy. Young people wandered and searched for a direction — an answer. And, more than a little, concerned and curious, too.

Perhaps pride and responsibility would get together, move in the right direction. They are old and tested words, but their practices are not old-fashioned or a step backward for society. The world has not changed to that extent.

Pride and responsibility can be taught, but like most precepts they are no use unless practiced. Michigan Week is an excellent idea, well designed as a symbol of pride in our state the year around rather than for a mere seven days.

The pride that our nation needs to take in itself goes a good deal farther and deeper than the mere observance of a Michigan Week or what have you. We must learn for ourselves and our children how to take pride in, first of all, ourselves. Be cognizant of our personal abilities and attributes and have confidence that we can't float them but do put them to use, and take pride in them.

And, lastly, that we, can also take pride in our home, our neighborhood, in our respective institutions, our city, our state's facilities, our school system, our highways, our college campuses, our public buildings, our community, our state, our country, our world before we ever have a chance as never had before and possibly never dreamed of. But we have them, and we should be proud of them and of our society that can provide them.

But the catalyst that turns pride into continuing progress is responsibility. No high school student, regardless of his price in his abilities, will make the grade in this world out there unless he acts responsibly. So, accordingly, regardless of his pride in our position and influence, can succeed unless he fulfills his responsibility to his job and society.

Society has laws, some good and some bad, but they are laws and they must be obeyed and observed by the responsible citizen. We may protest some of them, to change them is being irresponsible, but to break them is being irresponsible. Most of our problems are caused by irresponsibility and until this attitude changes the world will grow and democracy will only will.

Pride and responsibility go hand in hand to build and to maintain. We are proud of our home; WE must work to keep it looking nice. We are proud of our schools; WE are responsible for keeping them good, not good enough, but good. We are building a strong and beautiful tomorrow; WE are responsible for keeping it great.

Responsibility is a serious business. Fundamentally, it is far deeper than any campaign slogan. The Governor of Michigan Clinton County will find out, and thousands of adults who are out earning their way already know it. But the idea of pride and responsibility about being a good citizen is that you take pride in being responsible. The Americans who made our country what it is were that kind of people.

Death of a volunteer leader will leave a void

A lot of good people die every week, but, every week, a lot of good people die by their death brutal feelings that are commonly germinated in society. Higher standards of living mean higher standards of education and a person's education is a personal experience as well as a group experience and it is a fact of life and democratic responsibility is in whatever we do to the extent that we want to be responsible citizens. An example: Let's suppose a volunteer leader is elected for the Society in her place, but instead of doing the job the way she was elected to do it, she decides to do what she pleases. She could begin to do the job to the detriment of the organization.

The families of the people who are overlooking the death of a volunteer leader will find out that the statement, "A leader will leave a void," is no hollow abstraction. It means going out where there are no organizations and finding those who have a need for organizing. It also means giving to the people who are organized the help they need. We must do this. It is part of our responsibility as citizens.

Pride and responsibility go hand in hand. To build and to maintain. We are proud of our home, WE must work to keep it looking nice. We are proud of our schools; WE are responsible for keeping them good, not good enough, but good. We are building a strong and beautiful tomorrow; WE are responsible for keeping it great. The idea of pride and responsibility about being a good citizen is that you take pride in being responsible. The American who made our country what it is were that kind of people.

Higher water rates for poor water stress

To the Editor:

In the time it takes for you to read this, the United Nations will have sent out a plea for more water. The water crisis is real and with the world's population increasing, it seems the only possible solution to this problem is to increase the amount of water we use.

We have already seen the effects of this in the form of droughts, floods, and even wars. The world needs to start using water more efficiently. It is time we all realized that water is a precious resource that must be conserved.

FISHING

Having "a fish on the line", a "bleed", or even a "tug" is often a rewarding experience. The thrill of the chase and the excitement of landing a fish is a pastime enjoyed by many. However, there are some safety precautions that should be taken when fishing.

1. Always wear a life jacket when fishing, especially in open water or near shore.
2. Use proper equipment such as a fishing rod, reel, and bait.
3. Be aware of your surroundings and avoid areas with current.
4. Do not fish alone, especially in remote areas.
5. Follow local fishing regulations and be aware of the legal size and limits for the species you are targeting.

Take these precautions to ensure a safe and enjoyable fishing experience.
