Brandon White seeks School board election

A Clinton County school district is one of the few to have a student council. The council was formed to discuss and make recommendations on issues affecting the school. The council is open to all students and meets once a month.

The council recently held its first meeting and discussed a number of issues, including the school's dress code and the upcoming spring break.

The council's goals are to provide a platform for students to voice their concerns and to help improve the school's environment.

The council was formed by a group of students who were concerned about the lack of representation in the school's decision-making processes.

The council will hold its next meeting on Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. in the school's great room.

There's lots to see from a canoe

The Grand River, the 185-mile, long river that rambles along a meandering course between Jackson and Lansing, is the only canoe livery between the two cities.

The river, which is divided into several segments, offers a variety of canoeing experiences for both novice and expert paddlers. The river winds through the scenic countryside of south-central Michigan, offering views of farmland, forests, and small towns.

To explore the more than 200-mile length of the river, canoeists can start their journey at any of the put-ins, such as the one near DeWitt. The river flows through several counties, including Clinton, Ionia, and Ingham.

Canoeists planning a trip should be aware of the river's currents and changes in water levels. The river is known for its scenic beauty, wildlife, and historical sites, including the Red Cedar River, which flows through the Grand River Watershed and offers opportunities for fishing and wildlife observation.

Canoeing along the Grand River can be a rewarding experience, but it's important to take safety precautions and be prepared for any potential challenges. The river's water quality can vary, so it's essential to check current conditions before setting out on a trip.

The river also offers opportunities for educational programs and activities, such as interpretive tours and river clean-up projects.

Whether you're a seasoned paddler or new to canoeing, the Grand River offers a unique and memorable experience that's sure to be unforgettable.

The Battlefield of St. Johns was cleared for the May 26, 1976, parade as federal land. The United States Department of Interior has completed the original consideration of three parcels totaling 13 acres in St. Johns.

The parcels, located near the center of town, will be turned over to the City of St. Johns and are the site of the old St. Johns School. The school was demolished in 1974 and the parcels were designated as surplus by the Federal Government.

The land is valued at $19,000.00, but the city will only pay $5,700.00 to the Federal Government for the land. The city will also be responsible for the $5,700.00 for the land and the relocation costs of the school.

The land is located in the northwestern corner of the city and is adjacent to the St. Johns School. The city plans to use the land for a park and recreational area.

First county land owner buried in Grand Rapids

By Shirley Karher

U.S. Department of Interior Coordinator

The day was hot and muggy when the iron gates of St. Andrew's Cemetery swung open. The first white man to establish a settlement in what is now the City of Grand Rapids, Michigan, was buried in the churchyard. Other members of his historic stock have also chosen the final resting place. George Campau was 75 when he died in 1838, and was buried at the same site. His grandson, Rev. George Campau, 101, was also interred there. The cemetery was begun in 1837 by the Frenchman who wandered in from Canada and was called by them, George Campau.

On visiting the trading post he was to visit the site during the same day. He was located three blocks west of the village park, on Main Street. This was a unique experience of hosting the Frenchman who wandered in from Canada and was called by them, George Campau.

Dr. and Mrs. Hoyt Taylor of Grand Rapids were on hand for the dedication of his great-great grand­child. They are direct decendents of George Sowle, who came to this country on the Mayflower, and were among the five finalists in Friday night's 4-H talent competition at St. Johns High School.

Burke and the Whole World Marvel at You're Up to

As a creature, people tend to think that they don’t want to see the world as it is. They want to see it as they think it should be. But if you’re up to something, you can’t help but marvel at it.

As I was walking the dog with my usual walking stick, my wife commented, “What are you up to?”

I smiled. “I’m up to something,” I replied. “I’m exploring the world.”

She laughed. “But what are you exploring?”

I turned to face her. “I’m exploring the world,” I said again. “I’m exploring the world as it is.”

She shook her head. “But why?”

I shrugged. “I’m not sure. But it’s fascinating. I love seeing how things work.”

She sighed. “But it’s dangerous.”

I smiled. “Yes, it is. But it’s also worth it.”

She looked at me. “But what does it all mean?”

I turned to face her. “I’m not sure. But it’s a journey, isn’t it? And we all need to take those journeys.”

She nodded. “I suppose so.”

And with that, I continued my walk, marveling at the world around me.

Meet your Farm Bureau agent.

Why I'm proud to be an American.

The country is the land of opportunity, the land of freedom, the land of love. Americans have been leaders in economics, invention, and the arts. And these advances have made a huge difference in the lives of those who came before me, and those who are yet to come.

I love my country, but that love is not just for the country itself. It is the people of America who make this country great. They are the ones who have made it possible for me to be here today. So I can't help but be grateful for everything they've done for me.

Gauze fabrics set new trend

Gauze fabrics are beautiful, but practical, too. They are a favorite of mine, because they help keep me cool in hot weather and dry in the humid air. I use them to wrap my hair in, cover my head when I'm outside, and even as a topper for my bed. I love the way they feel against my skin, and I never have to worry about them getting too hot or wet. They're also great for absorbing moisture, which makes them perfect for anyone who sweats a lot. I can't imagine life without gauze fabrics, and I'm sure you'll agree with me!

The bronze birch borer
Willing and consent, this borer will be controlled. The larvae of the bronze birch borer will overwinter in the soil, then emerge in the spring to feed on the bark of birch trees. The borer will then drill into the tree, causing a hole in the bark. If left unchecked, the borer will continue to feed on the tree, eventually killing it. To control the borer, it is necessary to treat the affected trees with a systemic insecticide. This will kill the larvae of the borer and prevent them from feeding on the tree. It is important to treat the affected trees as soon as possible to prevent further damage.
