Clinton County grew 30 pct. in last decade

Preliminary census figures for Clinton County were released Monday night, giving a start to a period of increased population. By 1940, the county population figures were released, indicating a growth of 360 for the county, and a 1990 increase in 1960 to 37,969.

Clinton County has almost doubled in population since the 1940s. In 1940, the population was 19,399. By 1960, it had grown to 30,360, and by 1990, it was 68,418.

The 1990 census showed a population of 68,418, which is 68,418 per cent of the county's entire population. The 1980 estimate indicated 54,060 persons, and the 1970 census showed 42,800 residents.

The Tri-County Regional Planning Commission is now preparing its annual 10-year plan, which will reflect this increase in population. The commission will issue a report on the plan in the near future.

Clinton County, which is located in the southern part of the state, has a population of 68,418. The county is divided into 11 townships and 11 villages.

"I found a table that was exactly what I needed," she said. "I also found a couch that was perfect for my new apartment."

Insecticides can boost pest numbers

Although insecticides are used to control pests, they can also have unintended consequences. In some cases, insecticides can create a “pest refuge” where pest populations remain relatively low. This can allow pests to recover and build up resistance to insecticides. In other cases, insecticides can cause “pest explosions” where pest populations increase dramatically. This can happen when pesticides are used on a crop that is not susceptible to control, or when pesticides are used at a high enough concentration to cause harm to predators and other beneficial insects.

Erosion control structures

Erosion control structures are designed to slow down water flow and reduce soil erosion. They can be simple solutions, such as terraces or strip cropping, or complex systems, such as contour bunds or check dams. The success of erosion control structures depends on the local soil and water conditions, as well as the design and maintenance of the structures. In general, erosion control structures are most effective when combined with other land management practices, such as reduced tillage or cover crops.

Cherry crop is down

The Cherry Rock cherry crop for 1970 is forecast at 56,000 tons, a significant decrease from the 120,000 tons produced in 1969. The weather during the growing season was relatively favorable, except for a late frost that damaged some of the blossoms. The cherries that were able to ripen are expected to be of high quality.

Farmland loan program has some changes

In recent years, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has made changes to the farmland loan program to help farmers conserve and preserve their land. These changes include allowing for the purchase of conservation easements, providing loan guarantees for conservation projects, and offering financial incentives to farmers who choose to conserve land.

New farm programs help conserve land

Two new farm programs are being implemented to help conserve land. These programs provide financial incentives to farmers who choose to conserve land, such as by enrolling in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). The CRP provides farmers with payments to establish permanent cover on land that is not suited for crop production. The new farm programs are designed to help farmers conserve land while also providing income and other benefits.

Traffic accidents usually happen after dark, on two-lane roads, by speeding alcohol or drugs. In addition, there are factors which make driving after dark undesirable. The June-October edition of Michigan Guide offers a recreation program in summer months at the Grand Traverse Light, with the exception of the local Girl Scouts and Brownies who will be attending the Venice Festival in Charlevoix, July 8-11, the Munger Potato Festival in Munger, July 15-17, and the Michigan State Fair in Lansing, July 24-26, and Wyandotte, July 25-26. The event schedule for the latter is available by the communities' recreation programs in summer months at the Grand Traverse Light.

Church mergers - a loss of identity?

By REV. HUGH BANNINGER

Churches have been used at various times, to justify the creation of new churches, the addition of churches to the list of those which are already established, or to justify the establishment of new churches for places which are not already covered by churches. In the past, this has been done for geographical regions, or for the purpose of providing a church for the benefit of the people in a particular area. In the future, this practice should be discontinued, and the establishment of new churches should be based on the needs of the people, and not on the desires of the church authorities.

The establishment of new churches is not a matter of "luck" or "chance," but of careful planning and consideration. The purpose of churches is to serve the needs of the people, and not to simply increase the number of churches. Therefore, the establishment of new churches should be based on the needs of the people, and not on the desires of the church authorities.

There is still a movie to see, and it is a good one. Oh yes, Main Street still exists. The union of the United States and the Soviet Union is now a reality. This is a matter of "luck" or "chance," but of careful planning and consideration. The purpose of churches is to serve the needs of the people, and not to simply increase the number of churches. Therefore, the establishment of new churches should be based on the needs of the people, and not on the desires of the church authorities.

A new group appeared on the political scene during the late 1960s. The purpose of this group was to promote and support the establishment of new churches in an effort to increase the number of churches in the country. However, this attempt failed because the group was not able to gain the support of the people. The purpose of churches is to serve the needs of the people, and not to simply increase the number of churches. Therefore, the establishment of new churches should be based on the needs of the people, and not on the desires of the church authorities.
