Planning new shopping center

Plans for a $1 million shopping center were developed this week by a group of local business persons who have formed a corporation known as the Shop Hill Corporation.

The city, located on a triangular site at the intersection of Detroit Road and Card Rd., will be designed to accommodate a number of varied businesses and provide parking for many 100 vehicles. Principal components of the building complex will be anchored by the city—downtown furniture and drug store. Construction on the complex is anticipated to begin by late fall. At present, plans, which have been underway now for over one year, are flexible and can be adopted to suit the needs of any number of firms desiremathic location in the area. Initial structural design calls for men's store, drug store, restaurants, and two to each of the principal arteries surrounding the area.

The project involves four points, three for six years and one for one year. According to the plans, three for six years and one for one year. According to plans, the first steps will be to line up funds. The second will be to line up contractors. The third will be to line up potential tenants. The fourth will be to line up potential buyers.

Aylsworth, described as having a vision for the future, said the project would be a plus for the city.

According to the Census, in the next few decades the state will have to face a host of new medical and social problems. The Census predicts that the state will see an increase in the number of elderly people, and that a larger percentage of the population will be in the prime of life. This will put a strain on the state's health care system, and will require new measures to be taken to ensure that the elderly and the young are well cared for.

Several factors have contributed to this trend. One is the decline in the birthrate, which has led to a smaller pool of potential workers. Another is the aging of the population, which has led to an increase in the number of elderly people. Finally, the increasing cost of health care has made it more difficult for some to afford medical care.

The state will have to take steps to address these issues. One possibility is to increase the funding for health care programs. Another is to encourage people to save for their retirement, so that they will have enough money to pay for their medical care. Finally, the state could consider implementing a universal health care program, which would ensure that everyone has access to basic medical care.
Use special care with woolen items

Have you put away those wools, garments and household items that you're not using during the summer? Remember that these items often store pests, since infestation can develop rapidly once the "insects" you'll not be using during the year around, woolen items require cleaning and care to keep all woolen items free from pests. So regular airing, brushing and vacuuming are necessary actions to prevent problems. Such airing is necessary for several hours, better for overnight. If you've not seen evidence of insects, then airing is not necessary. Regular airing is an excellent preventative if you're not using these items. Use special care with woolen items.

Records reveal herd efficiency

Eugene Smolinski recently recorded some figures that may be of interest to farmers. His study, based on the records and data of the Michigan State University dairy program, represents the first published report on herd management in the State of Michigan. These figures can be used to evaluate management practices and identify areas for improvement.

At Michigan State University's dairy herd, a recent study at MSU has measured the reproductive efficiency of the herd. By comparing the number of servings with the number of calves born, the following results were obtained:

- About 90 per cent (80 out of 100) of the cows that were served produced a calf.
- The entire herd achieved an average of more than 14
servings per cow born throughout the year. By mating the number of servings to the number of calves born, the reproductive efficiency of the herd was estimated to be 78 per cent.

These figures can be compared to the number of servings needed for maximum reproductive efficiency, which is estimated to be around 25
servings. By using these norms for determining if a herd is performing optimally, farmers

Harvest of wheat crop moves nearer

The 1968 wheat crop in Michigan is progressing very fast, and harvest should soon be starting in the northern counties. A substantial quantity of the 1968 crop will be harvested by the first week in July. All the northern counties are expected to be in the harvest by July 10, and all counties should have at least 50 per cent of the crop harvested by July 15. The rest of the crop will be harvested later. In general, it is expected that the 1968 crop will be a very satisfactory one, despite the drought of 1958.

Foliar Sprayfed Soybeans and Corn

The use of foliar feeding programs is maturing rapidly, and is expected to become a standard practice by the year 2000. It not only increased yields, but most important increased the quality in citrus, and maintains that were before unheard of. It is sprayed just right for foliar feeding with NA-CHURS. Row crop, soybeans and corn are advantages, for example, the increase in the case-study shows that the nutrient levels in soybeans are very high, and that the yields are much higher than when the crop is sprayed by broadcast method.

MINIMUM TILLAGE EROSION CONTROL THEORY

The use of minimum tillage systems has been increasing rapidly in recent years. These systems are designed to reduce soil erosion, improve water quality, and increase crop yields. The basic principle of minimum tillage is to reduce the amount of soil disturbance, which is the primary cause of soil erosion. This is achieved by using conservation practices such as crop rotations, cover crops, and reduced tillage.

WHEAT VALUE IS SET

A value of $6.5 per bushel was just announced by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the 1968 wheat crop. This is based on the average price paid to farmers for their wheat, and includes a premium for the quality of the wheat. The price is set based on the annual production of wheat in the United States, and is determined by the supply and demand for wheat in the world market. The price is also influenced by factors such as weather conditions, crop yields, and government policies.

Advice given to colleagues.

The U.S. has earned the idea of individual freedom farther than any people have ever done before—so far that we seem to be in danger of forgetting that the back side of the coin of freedom carries a crest which reads, "with liberty and property for sale." No other country do young people have the degree of freedom allowed in the U.S. today, the president of Standard Oil Company (Indiana), told members of Tulsa Junior Achievement at their annual banquet last night. But neither is the personal freedom—unbridled—is an in­

Sneeze season is here!

Hay fever or pollen allergy can affect anyone and can cause severe discomfort to the affected individuals. Here are some tips to help you manage your symptoms:

1. Identify Your Allergens: The first step is to identify what triggers your symptoms. Common allergens include pollens, dust, and mold.
2. Avoid Allergens: Once you know your triggers, try to avoid them as much as possible. This might involve changing your routine or making adjustments to your living space.
3. Use Air Filters: Air filters can help reduce the amount of allergens in your home. Consider using a high-efficiency particulate air (HEPA) filter.
4. Take Medications: Antihistamines and decongestants can help relieve symptoms.
5. Consult a Doctor: If your symptoms are severe or persistent, it's a good idea to consult a doctor. They can prescribe medications or recommend other treatments.

Remember, hay fever can be managed, but it's important to take appropriate measures to control your symptoms. Stay healthy and happy this sneeze season!
