DeWitt Twp residents protest sewer construction

DeWitt Twp -- Daggott Rd residents are quite upset about having a sewer line run through their neighborhood. After the residents complained several times, the city decided to survey the area to determine how the township could determine if there is sewer use in the Daggott Rd area. The residents in the area have said that they will not allow the sewer line to be run through their neighborhood and have threatened to sue the city if the sewer line is approved.

The Commisioners heard D. N. Nesen, chairman of the State Corrections Department, and the Legislature from Clinton County were Commissioner chairman, Donald ROBERT RUSSELL 3 years ago, it would be felt that the local people needed a jail. At that time, the State Corrections Department allowed counties such as Gratiot and Clinton to come under the State Corrections Department and build jails that meet the requirements of the new jail, it is estimated that the cost of building the jail is $10.881 - $13.060.

Children unable to pay the cost of meals in a broad number of areas by the center's operation. Now, as its leader, Commissioner Mr. Martin, a representative of the state Department of Corrections, states that the Commissioners have heard the proposals from the island for the new jail, and the Commissioners have heard the proposal of the proposed state jail code. The Commissioners have heard the proposal of the proposed state jail code. The Commissioners have heard the proposal of the proposed state jail code.

The information provided on the ruling of the official is considered. However, it is not to be one of the better rehabilitation programs the Government has ever supported what is reported to be the most important program in the state and have spent millions on a single program. However, he said that the area "will not now be committed to a new jail." Under the provision of the state commission, the Supervisors of the new jail will not be considered by the State Corrections Department.

Phase 48: how we got there

By ARCH N. BOOTH
Executive Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States

Dear Grandchildren—You have asked me to explain how we got to Phase 48 of our temporary economic controls program. Let me begin by saying that it is not an easy road to go back over. We were all in it together. If you can understand what happened, then you will have a good education.

Phase 48, as you may remember, was the time when all prices were regulated by law rather than by what businesses were able to make things to spend it on, prices went up. This is what caused the trouble in 1971.

When a government prints money faster than a country's businessmen can manage to spend it on, prices go up, because there is more money to buy things with, but not more things to buy. This is what caused the trouble in 1971.

Freeze economic problems were in the air, but because businessmen cannot tell what people want most when a government prints money faster than what they are willing to spend. Since the important in the government are smart enough to know this, they announced that the freeze would only be "temporary."

And so it was. The freeze and Phase II looked good at first, but because the economy was in recession anyway when they were applied, prices and wages usually don't rise in a slow economy anyway. Everyone was so happy about the freeze that the government gave it the credit for the moderation of price increases.

It was a rough time building up under the interior of Phase II. Some important commodities began to run short. It took some time before the government could make money by supplying them under the Phase II price limits.

Phase II was made to last as long as possible, but the labor unions were allowed wage increases much larger than Phase II was supposed to permit, because the government was afraid of them.

So, it was a time of uncertainty, the government officially ended Phase II about the time it would have come into place, but Phase II was replaced by Phase III, which was very loose.

The program that had been building up under Phase II came out in the open in Phase III, prices went up fast. Some bad luck added to that, and the weather was very cold our Midwes	 had a shortage of food raised prices much faster than usual.

This using up of the Federal Reserve System, increased the money supply too fast in 1972. Deviation of that money was not so attractive to the foreign countries, which added to shortages on the American market, which added to shortages of the foods from which we get most of electricity and gasoline.

Prices climbed fastest for those things that were in shortest supply. This stimulates increased production, which is healthy. But high prices are unpopular, for very understandable reasons.

Politicians began to claim that the government could control high prices just by passing a law against them. Many people wanted to believe that, because passing a law is much easier than increasing supplies, which is the only real cure for high prices.

Politicians proved that passing a law was the answer to our problems, President Nixon was forced to act.

So the President proclaimed the second freeze, and then Phase IV, which was a lot like Phase II.

Phase V didn't work, of course, Phase V was initiated to make up for its defects.

Anyway, that's how we eventually got to Phase 48, Phase 48, but you just believed that some problems have no easy solutions. So they began to hope that the answer lay in advertising, "It is very curious that suspire..."

The ball was the thing that most readers were concerned with. It was a statistical fact that boys had been magazine for the first time. Put-take pheasant open house planned

LANSING — Michigan's first, annual open house for the 1973-74 pheasant season will be held by the Department of Natural Resources this weekend at the DNR hatchery near Mason. The hatchery is located about seven miles west of Mason, off M-55 near Monroe Township. The hatchery will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Michigan residents who held their pheasant hunting permits for the 1973-74 season will be allowed to work at the hatchery, which will be staffed with state Hatchery personnel.

Thousands of young pheasants will be released at the opening of the season, October 21. The hatchery staff will be on hand to talk about the hatchery's operations and answer questions about pheasant hunting.

Michigan residents will have the opportunity to see the hatchery's facilities and learn about the pheasant hunting season in Michigan. The hatchery is open to the public on a first-come, first-served basis. Attendees are welcome to bring their own transportation to the hatchery.

Please note: This event is open to Michigan residents only. Non-resident hunters are not allowed to participate in this event. For more information about the event, please contact the Michigan Department of Natural Resources at 517-335-5100.

Market demand, new farm program discussed at regional ASCS meeting

The only way Americans ever make mistakes is to believe that it can’t happen to them. After that, they try to convince themselves that it didn’t happen to them.

Reinforcing Wisconsin’s statement of the need for the type of farm program that is being implemented in Michigan, Michigan State University Agricultural Economist John R. Alley said that Wisconsin would be the only state that would get away with it. He said the Michigan State Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act, which is similar to the Wisconsin law, has been passed by the Wisconsin legislature and signed into law by Governor Rockford.

Alley pointed to the fact that Wisconsin has had a similar law for some time and that the Michigan law is basically a copy of the Wisconsin law. He noted that the Wisconsin law has been in effect for three years and that it has been very successful. He said that the Michigan law is very important because it will help to reduce the number of farm accidents.

Alley said that the Michigan law is similar to the Wisconsin law in that it requires farmers to maintain certain safety standards and that it allows the state to file suit against farmers who fail to meet those standards.

Alley said that the Michigan law is also important because it will help to reduce the number of farm accidents in the state. He noted that the Wisconsin law has been in effect for three years and that it has been very successful in reducing the number of farm accidents.

Opinion is a great weapon, and its best use is a strong argument on the subject. Even when the argument is wrong, it can still be a good piece of writing or speaking. The point of the argument is to persuade people to believe in something different than what you believe. This can be done through logic, emotion, or appeals to authority. The procedure for this is typically to present evidence and reasons in support of your position, followed by a rebuttal of the opposition's arguments.

Types of Opinion

1. Ethical: These arguments are concerned with right and wrong. They can help us decide how we should act in the face of moral dilemmas.
2. Aesthetic: These arguments are concerned with beauty and art. They can help us decide which works of art are worth appreciating and why.
3. Value: These arguments are concerned with the value of different things. They can help us decide which things are valuable and why.

Examples of Opinion

1. "We should not cut class."
2. "The Mona Lisa is the most beautiful painting ever made."
3. "Money is the most important thing in life."
American Central averts lawsuit by Michigan

Central has agreed to adhere to new standards set by the Michigan Department of Consumer and Industry Services to avoid a lawsuit.

Central's agreement to stop a number of sales techniques, including high-pressure telephone calls, was a response to complaints from consumers. The settlement also includes measures to ensure that consumers have a right to cancel their contracts.

Courtroom

The lawsuit against Central was brought by the State of Michigan, alleging that the company was violating consumer protection laws.

Judge

In the judgment signed by the judge, it was stated that Central will stop using high-pressure telephone calls as a method of solicitation. The settlement also includes a five-day "cooling-off" period for consumers to reassess their purchases.

Central

Central has agreed to implement new standards, including the use of a five-day "cooling-off" period and a revised sales technique. The company has also agreed to provide consumers with a written explanation of their rights.

Conclusion

The settlement is expected to provide relief to consumers and enhance the company's reputation. Central has agreed to report any violations of the new standards to the Michigan Department of Consumer and Industry Services.

J. Glenn Dickey's summer home is in New York, where he will have lunch for the day before returning to his home in Michigan. The day will begin with a stop at the State Capitol in Lansing, and he will again visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dickey, on their farm in western Michigan.

J. Glenn Dickey has been active in Michigan agriculture for many years, serving on various committees and boards. He was appointed to his current position by Governor John Engler in 1971.

Dickey's appointment was made 2 years ago that she promised to take the students at the school for a tour of the campus. She is now visiting the school as part of her tour.

The Ola Elementary School is a small school in the rural area surrounding Middletown-Perrinton.

Grades eight through twelve can attend afternoon sessions.

Grades through seven, if tickets are available, may attend assembly programs and plays, during the school year.

She had left her home in western Michigan 4 years ago. She has been living in Canada for the past 2 years, working as a baby sitter for small children in an orphanage in Ottawa. When she returns to her home in western Michigan, she plans to continue her education and make a career in the help of others.

Janet, 22 years old, is the daughter of Mrs. Pudge Deming, and the crop grown is only 4 years.

The little calves, Janet says, are a source of income for her family. Each year, she decides to make her crop larger, hoping to increase her income.

Janet was born in western Michigan, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kauma, are involved in the farming business. She left her home at age 14 to travel to New Zealand, where she will again board a ship, Orianna, from British Columbia, and go to Australia. She will then be in Australia, where she will again visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kauma, on their farm in western Michigan. She will again live in Canada, where she will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kauma, on their farm in western Michigan.

Janet says she is looking forward to returning to her home in western Michigan, where she will once again be able to work on her family's farm.
