What is this man doing?

Ted Powell turns the valve that opens his 440-gallon house to the sewer line in DeWitt. Thursday morning, Powell arrived at King Arthur's Court after having been arrested in Trumbull. He was later released on $500 bond. Powell, who is a member of the School Board, is facing charges for not hooking his lagoon into the county drain. Powell said he had not filled in his septic tank.

Teachers work on last year's contract

ST. JOHNS — The St. Johns Education Association has announced the rejection of the school board's final contract offer. The contract offer was rejected because the school board did not meet the Association's demand for a $200 salary increase.

The teachers are now in the second year of negotiations for a new contract. The teachers have been without a contract since September 1, 1974.

St. Johns is winner of safety award

ST. JOHNS — St. Johns has been designated a winner of American Automobile Association's 2nd annual Pedestrian Safety Achievement Citation. The city was selected for a "significant progress" among all cities, in a "marked reduction in pedestrian fatalities and injuries." This citation recognizes programs that have reduced pedestrian deaths and injuries, as well as administrative programs designed to reduce pedestrian fatalities and injuries.

Perryville Winds was named the highest ranking city in the competition, and the award of Excellence, a national competition, was presented by AAA. The Pedestrian Safety Achievement Citation was presented by AAA.

"AAA's goal is to prevent pedestrian deaths and injuries," said AAA President Paul Winter. "Perryville, Winds was named the highest ranking city in the competition, and the award of Excellence, a national competition, was presented by AAA. The Vanishing American Today’s dairy farmer milks cows on the edge of a chasm. Standing on one foot.

In a high wind.

From his precarious vantage point, he sees increasing costs of such production necessities as feed, fuel and fertilizers; and he sees a farm income declining by comparison.

About half of the U.S. dairy farmers in business five years ago no longer are.

In Michigan, the nation’s third-ranking dairy state, the number of dairy farms has dropped from about 14,000 a decade ago to 7,700 last year. The number is expected to be 4,500 by 1980.

Today’s dairy farmer knows he cannot stand alone. He needs a marketing agency.

For 5,400 of the state’s 7,700 dairy farmers, that ally is MMPA, a milk marketing pool that is owned and controlled by its members.

MAPA, through a variety of service and marketing programs, pledges itself to work for the benefit of its dairy farmer members. MMPA works for a fair return on dairy products to farmers and works to maintain stability in the dairy product market.

MMPA’s many programs also benefit consumers. The association encourages high milk production which, combined with sound and positive marketing practices, assures ample milk for Michigan consumers. MMPA also promotes good dairy farming practices among its members to assure that milk sent to market under the MMPA banner is of highest possible quality.

Dairy farming is the first-ranking segment of the state’s No. 2 industry..

And we at MMPA are dedicated to the belief that the Vanishing American is important. We do our best to protect this important resource—the dairy farming industry—its worth preserving.

Livestock waste facilities book now available

EAST LANSING — Michigan producers of livestock are being urged to build, operate and maintain their livestock waste facilities as efficiently and economically as possible. The urgency is due to the expected increase in livestock waste from manure production, and the urgent need for additional funds to build new livestock waste facilities.

"Lowest operating costs, highest efficiency, best performance," is the slogan used to promote the new livestock waste facilities book, which is now available from the Michigan State University Extension Service. The book provides a comprehensive guide to the construction, operation and maintenance of livestock waste facilities, including information on the latest technology and best practices.

The book is available at all Michigan State University Extension offices and can be ordered online at the Michigan State University Extension website. It costs $20 per copy and can be paid for by check or credit card.

"Our goal is to help Michigan producers make informed decisions about their livestock waste facilities," said John Ayers, Michigan State University Extension's agriculture and natural resources specialist. "By providing this information, we hope to help producers save money and operate more efficiently.

"The book is a great tool for anyone involved in the livestock industry," Ayers said. "It provides practical information that can be applied to real-world situations.

"In addition, the book includes information on the latest technology and best practices, which can help producers stay ahead of the curve and be more competitive in the market.

"We urge all Michigan producers of livestock to purchase the book and use it as a valuable resource in managing their livestock waste facilities."
When is beef ready to ship?

BRY LANDING — Current 100 price differences between prime and choice grade steers may have been bewilder many cattle feeders.

"A year and one half to two years of the age of a choice grade. For most Michigan cattle feeders, that's a big enough difference to justify the increased cost of feeding to the weight where they are likely to hit the choice grade," said Lynn B. Plowman, Michigan State University beef specialist.

The increased cost of feeding to the weight where they are likely to hit the choice grade is now about $66 more if he hits the choice grade. For most beef Extension specialists, the best way to determine how live cattle will grade is to consider weight of the animal in relation to his skeletal frame. Here are Plowman's guidelines:

- Large framed cattle, however, have a heavier mature weight and choice grade cattle may have feed to owners carrying steers currently worth $66 more if he hits the choice grade.

- Brahman crosses.

- Charolais, Holstein, Maine Anjou.

- Sires of the Kan-Sun and you can choose one of four models that best fit your needs.

- And conditioning Equipment Idea) for the farmer who's daily harvest rate is under 2,000 bushels, or the one whose daily harvest rate is under 2,100 bushels, or the one who wants to make a minimum dryer investment, or the one who wants to make a maximum dryer investment, or the one who wants to make a minimum dryer investment, or the one who wants to make a maximum dryer investment.

- A new, low priced, automated, portable grain dryer.

- Its a good tall for coho, chinook anglers.

- The Michigan State Senate is considering a bill to add $10 price differences between good and choice grade steers to the state's $10 price difference between good and choice grade steers. For most beef Extension specialists, this is the best way to determine how live cattle will grade is to consider weight of the animal in relation to his skeletal frame.
